

Leadership Institute

March 12-14, 2015

Lanier Islands Legacy Lodge

Lake Lanier Islands, Buford/Gwinnett County

All sessions and meals will be held at Legacy Lodge

As elected officials, county commissioners must work with a wide variety of people, organizations, jurisdictions, groups, and interests. County commissioners become public leaders by virtue of having been elected. Leadership is an ongoing process that never ends, and communication, trust, and relationships are key to being an effective leader. In this course participants will assess their personal leadership styles, practice world-class leadership communication, explore how they disclose and present themselves and how this affects their relationships with others, and reflect on their leadership experiences to help inform and guide their chosen journey as public leaders.
